

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A digital camera is used with a microscope which comprises an objective lens system with a variable observing magnification and an illumination optical system provided at a predetermined position with respect to the objective lens system for illuminating an object to be observed. The camera comprises a correction unit for correcting a photographed image of the object to be observed in accordance with image correction data corresponding to each predetermined observing magnification of the objective lens system.